Discerning the Body

In his first letter to the Corinthian church, Paul attempts to point out and correct many of their failures to live in ways that honor Christ. In chapter 11, he deals with some specific behavior as they met together. He goes so far as to say that the way they were ignoring one another as they came together to observe the Lord’s Supper was possibly causing more harm than good – a very sobering possibility that I am sure neither they, nor we, rarely consider.

In light of Paul’s criticism of their behavior regarding failure to include each other, we must conclude that above all else the Lord’s Supper is an event that should include the entire assembled body of Christians. Therefore, the recognition or discernment of the body of the Lord not only refers to the sacrificed physical body of Jesus, but the proper recognition that those of us who are Christians compose His spiritual body. We have in common that we are all covered by His blood, regardless of differences. And we will remember, not only that He shed His blood, but what that blood bought – our salvation. Since we have all sinned, it is only His sacrifice, His blood, that covers us and separates us from those yet uncovered.

Regarding the use of a cappella music during the communion service, the elders have found no scriptural directive other than Paul’s urging that we “discern/ recognize” the body of Christ as we participate together in the Lord’s supper. After several weeks of implementation and inviting your input through a brief survey, the elders have decided to periodically use a cappella music, with or without lyrics, during the Lord’s Supper. This means music will not be used every time we commune. We thank all of you who expressed your wishes. As we consider other members of the body of Christ meeting together to worship God and remember our Lord Jesus who died for each of us, may we not discern/see our differences, but only the precious blood that covers us all.
